"5 Star Artists" is the newest exhibit to grace the halls of USCB Center for the Arts, and will run from June 21 through August 21. Curator Joan Templer has chosen 5 diverse artists for an exhibit that transcends the traditional. All the artists are local, living and working in Beaufort. Some are young and filled with exuberant enthusiasm for their art and others have been perfecting their craft for decades. All have Star Quality.

Josh Ferguson, at 29 years old, is the youngest emerging star. His work is a showcase of landscape photography originating in the Lowcountry of South Carolina, expanding across America and even stretching across the Atlantic to the European Continent. Josh has been exhibiting this past year at Beaufort Art Association and received an acceptance into their 2013 Spring Exhibit Juried Show. When not honing his photographic skills, Josh is an athletic trainer at Beaufort High and Carolina Sportscare.

Jeremy Way is another emerging star, fast becoming known in the Beaufort area for his surrealistic oil paintings with unique style. His work has the appeal of the Dutch masters with dream imagery in the most visually unusual way possible. His easily-recognizable style captures the attention of his viewers. Precision, patience and artistic skill are evident in every piece. Jeremy, only in his mid 30s, has been developing his art for the last 20 years. As a young boy he was fortunate to attend many gifted student art programs in Beaufort and Savannah. He received a BFA from the prestigious Manhattan School of Visual Arts. www.jeremyway.com

Sebastian Polanski is our 3rd Star Artist. A relative
