

Linda Sheppard, a Beaufort artist, will hold an exhibition of paintings of her private students from October 1 through October 31 at the USCB Center for the Arts.

Linda began teaching art in 1970 in Denver, Colorado. She is particularly interested in teaching art and holding interdisciplinary shows that connect art with other creative endeavors. In the past she has invited a ballet studio to pick several paintings of her students and develop interpretative dances to catch the spirit of a few of the paintings. The dances were the program at the art opening. Other times, Linda has visited high school English classes. She gave one class a theme of "Friday." She painted a Friday painting and the students wrote poems or some essays to express Friday. In another English class each

Never Too Young, Never Too Old to Learn

Written by Editor

Monday, 05 October 2015 15:22

