

The Pat Conroy Literary Center's Visiting Writers Series presents

Thomas McConnell reading from his debut novel The Wooden King at NeverMore Books (702 Craven St., Beaufort) on Thursday, September 27, at 4:00 p.m. and Georgia poet Clifford Brooks reading from his collections Athena Departs and The Draw of Broken Eyes & Whirling Metaphysics on Tuesday, October 2, at 2:00 p.m. at the Hilton Head Island Library (11 Beach City Rd, Hilton Head). Both events are free and open to the public, with book signings to follow the readings.

In the spirit of Kristin Hannah's The Nightingale and Anthony Doerr's All the Light We Cannot See, McConnell's newly released novel The Wooden King explores denial, desire, and family drama against the lyrically rendered backdrop of World War II, deftly navigating "the simple difference between what we do and what we ought to do" in the face of rising totalitarianism. Books will be available for sale and autographing following the reading.

Acclaimed novelist Ron Rash praised, "The Wooden King is a profound and timely meditation on one man caught between allegiance to his family and to his country. Thomas McConnell vividly renders the dark ironies of history, but readers will encounter compassion, decency, and courage also. What an excellent debut!"

Library Journal

said, "McConnell shines in re-creating the stifled life of Czechs under the Occupation. Drama builds from start to finish with a conclusion that is particularly powerful."

He has received the South Carolina Academy of Authors Fiction Fellowship, the Hackney National Literary Award for the Short Story, and his story collection A Picture Book of Hell and Other Landscapes was published by Texas Tech University Press. Former U.S. Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky praised, "Clifford Brooks writes a passionate, eloquent poetry, as wide-ranging as the models he sometimes invokes, including the blues and the epics." Poet and editor Jon Tribble, author of And There Is Many a Good Thing, assured, "Brooks creates in his work places where the blues and philosophy both sing their songs of modern doubt and love In his vast and varied writings in Athena Departs, he invites us to consider where are our voices in this world of problems and possibilities. He will keep singing strong and clear, hoping we find our notes and join the chorus."

As part of his lowcountry visit, Brooks will be speaking to a class of USC Beaufort poetry students and to the Island Writers Network on Monday, October 1, prior to his public reading at the Hilton Head Island Library on Tuesday, October 2, at 2:00 p.m.
