

Jessica Handler learned creative writing from the late Pat Conroy when he served as a guest instructor at the Paideia School in Atlanta, just prior to the publication of his first novel, The Great Santini.

Handler, the author of two memoirs, published her debut novel The Magnetic Girl in April of this year. The nonprofit Pat Conroy Literary Center (905 Port Republic Street, Beaufort) will host Handler for a reading and discussion of her novel on Tuesday, August 6, at 5:30 p.m. Free and open to the public, the discussion will be followed by a book signing.

The Magnetic Girl has been named one of Wall Street Journal's Ten Books You'll Want to Read this Spring, an Indie Next Pick, and a Spring Okra Pick of the Southern Independent Booksellers Alliance. Set in rural north Georgia two decades after the Civil War, the novel follows thirteen-year-old Lulu Hurst. Lulu reaches high into her father's bookshelf and pulls out an obscure book, The Truth of Mesmeric Influence.

Deemed gangly and undesirable, Lulu wants more than a lifetime of caring for her disabled baby brother, Leo, with whom she shares a profound and supernatural mental connection.

Lulu begins to "captivate" her friends and family, controlling their thoughts and actions for brief
